"Love is as close to magic as anything we will ever know. It conjures hope where none was seen before. It makes anger and hurt disappear. It pulls healing out of a hat. Love challenges us to understand how it all seems to work so easily and amazes us with the simple surprise of its appearance in places we never expected. We work in love, through love, and for love, but we never control love, we never own what has been given to us. It is a mystery we inhabit, a power in which we dwell. And it knows our name. May this magic surround you. May it dazzle you and enchant you and delight you until it changes you. May it work its wonder in your heart, a child watching life unfold like paper flowers pulled from a pocket."

The Rt. Rev. Steven Charleston
