"Time to let go for a while, let the worries I have held so tightly in my hands float up to heaven like so many brightly colored balloons, let the frustrations I have known fall from my fingers like confetti, let the weight around my shoulders sprout wings and lift me off this troubled sphere, up and out into cleaner air, where only birds and prayers fly among the clouds.

I have stood my post. I have been diligent and serious and caring. Now it is time to let go, for a while, a while of laughter and music, of candlelight and starlight and all the lights Japanese lanterns can muster to make my backyard a palace by the sea. Yes, it is time to let go."

~ The Rt. Rev. Steven Charleston,
Choctaw
